Introduction

“I never thought I’d be here.”

“I don’t even know where to begin.”

These are words heard all too often as a result of the challenges of today’s economic times. Knowing how overwhelming the situation can truly feel, it is our hope to provide you with guidance and knowledge to forge ahead. The following is a collaborative effort by many agencies who serve Greater Manchester to provide information about these services.

It is our every hope that as you access these services you will find practical means of assistance. Allowing you to free up your limited cash resources and apply them toward expenses we cannot assist with.

If you are a member of a faith community, please do not hesitate to communicate your needs within that community.

We wish you every success as you work through this time of challenge; remembering that there are better days ahead.

For Service Providers:

In addition to the information indicated above, some agencies have provided instructions for interagency referral which will help to create a smoother referral process. If you would like to include information about your agency in this toolkit, or if you are included, but need to make changes, please contact Susan Poulin at susan.poulin@use.salvationarmy.org.

Food

The most available resource in Southern NH is food. Utilizing programs like food stamps, WIC, and school lunch will help reduce your monthly expenses. This will allow you to use your income in areas where assistance is less available. The first resource to consider when attempting to stretch your family income is to apply for food stamps and utilize area pantries. When utilizing food pantries, keep in mind most will only offer non-perishable items – with the exception of Food for Children and New Horizons (see below). Try to stock up on items you will need to save your cash or food stamps for fresh vegetables, meats, and dairy.

Fuel and Electric

Another way that New Hampshire residents can take a proactive approach to expanding their income is to apply for fuel assistance through their local CAP agency. The idea here is to get the utility help you qualify for whether oil, gas, electric, or some other type of utility. This will reduce your expenses making more cash available to you. Additional resources are available in the case of an emergency (see below). A situation is considered an emergency when a disconnect notice has been issued or an oil tank is empty. Most agencies require that you have applied for fuel assistance before considering heating assistance. A denial from one agency does not necessarily mean that another agency will also issue a denial.

Southern NH Services – Fuel Assistance

603-647-4470
160 Silver Street
Manchester, NH

Service Area: Hillsborough County (CAP agencies are located in every county, residents of other counties should locate their local CAP agency)

Winter heating fuel assistance benefits range from $150 to $1125. Fuel assistance is available once a year depending on household income and heating costs. This benefit can also be used toward rent when heat is included in the rent and the rent is not subsidized.

Electric Assistance: Year round discount on household electricity bill. Discounts range from 5% to 70% depending on household income.

Weatherization: Weatherization of the household to make the home safe, comfortable, and less costly to heat. Electric usage will also be discussed to reduce non heating electric base load costs.

NHN: The Neighbor Helping Neighbor fund will help clients who do not qualify for Fuel Assistance but have a utility disconnect notice or a broken payment arrangement and a financial hardship.

Other various energy assistance programs are available. These may help with utility or heating costs for families in an emergency situation with a financial hardship.

Security Deposit Loan Program: The Way Home is a local administrator for New Hampshire's Housing Security Guarantee Program for households with incomes no more than 50% of the area's median income. Through this program the landlord is guaranteed a portion or all of the security deposit. The guaranteed amount is the security deposit loan for which the tenant agrees to make monthly payments to The Way Home. Those seeking a security deposit loan are to make an appointment with a housing counselor for a housing affordability counseling session. For a loan transaction to be closed, an applicant must be able to pay the ongoing costs and demonstrate the ability to be successful tenants, the condition of the apartment must be acceptable, the landlord must agree accept the Letter of Guarantee. Often applicants are approved contingent on specific steps designed to make housing affordable.

Homelessness Prevention and Rapid Re-Housing (HPRP). This special program designed to rapidly transition low income renters to stability, either through their own means or through public assistance has two parts:

Homelessness Prevention is available to households in need of assistance to remain housed. The Way Home is administering HPRP Homelessness Prevention for Manchester households. Applicants meet with a housing counselor to work out a housing affordability plan. If the housing unit is not safe and affordable, the applicant may be assisted to relocate. If HPRP rental assistance is approved, it will be short-term, shallow assistance, which may be used toward current or back rent to prevent an eviction. Continued financial assistance requires effective use of housing stabilization services provided by the Housing Counselor to coach the participant on their housing stability goals.

Rapid Re-Housing for New Hampshire households who are homeless or victims of domestic violence is also administered by The Way Home. Program participants are assisted to locate a safe, affordable apartment and to take steps toward housing stability. Financial assistance is available for moving costs, security deposit, and short-term rental assistance.

Housing Counseling for Home Owners. The Way Home's HUD Housing Counseling Specialist teaches financial management skills to make housing affordable. The Housing Counselor will work with both the homeowner and the mortgage servicing personnel on strategies to prevent foreclosure. The process includes reviewing options that may be available through specific investors, mortgages servicers and government resources, providing a financial assessment of family income/expenses, outlining a menu of cost cutting options, reviewing programs available to assist client to consolidate debt, and setting up payment plans. Once financial management issues have been reviewed with the client, the Housing Counselor will advocate with the mortgagor on resolutions that may be available. The first effort is to keep the home with reinstatement of the mortgage which may be accomplished up to the date of auction / sale by servicer. If the client has to give up the home, efforts are made to reduce the loss through pre-foreclosure sale, short-sale or deed-in lieu of foreclosure. The Way Home's rental housing counseling and homelessness prevention services are available to assist the client to relocate.

Dealing with the Economic Downturn

We are all feeling the effects of these tough economic times. With the crisis on Wall Street, we've seen savings plummet, home foreclosures in unprecedented numbers, bankruptcies on the increase and the cost of everything going up. With unemployment on the rise there is worry about job security and layoffs. With all the uncertainty and no quick fix on the horizon, it's no surprise that people are feeling angry, anxious and depressed.

"One of the things that can really get to people in these economic times is the uncertainty and the loss of a sense of control over their circumstances. The economy has impacted people who never would have imagined they could be in this situation, struggling with financial losses or job loss for the first time. For others, the added stress has placed even greater pressure on relationships that may have already been strained or on their ability to cope with existing issues such as depression or substance abuse," notes Rik Cornell, MSW, ACSW, LICSW, Clinical Director and therapist with Bedford Counseling Associates.

Knowing how to make the best of these difficult times can go a long way in helping to cope. One of the healthiest things people can do is not deny the stress, but recognize it and take healthy steps to manage it. "Not to minimize the difficult realities many people are facing, but there are some very simple steps people can take to help maintain their emotional balance and overall well-being," notes Cornell. Some simple self-care steps include the following:

- Recognize the difference between the things you do and do not have control over. Take stock of your personal situation and make a specific plan to address those things that you can control. Concentrate on things that are doable.
 - Get some exercise; go for walks, run or other physical activities.
 - Eat a healthy diet and avoid the tendency to overindulge in food, alcohol or other drugs as a misguided way to "reduce stress."
 - Get enough sleep.
 - Monitor and adjust your breathing pattern. Shallow breaths increase tension.
 - Try simple relaxation techniques like yoga or meditation.
 - Turn to your spiritual or religious community as a source of support.
 - Allow your support system of family, friends or work colleagues to provide positive emotional support. Looking directly at people when conversing makes you feel more connected to them.

- Reach out to help others; giving of yourself can go a long way in restoring your own sense of self-worth and purpose.

“Depending on a person’s personality type, some individuals will be naturally more optimistic, resilient and adaptable in the face of uncertainty. These folks will respond to the economic downturn by coming up with a strategy for how they will get by with less money or see an opportunity to take stock and make needed changes in their life. While others who are more anxious or depressed to begin with may find these uncertain times overwhelming,” observes Cornell.

Stress and anxiety during these tough times is normal. But if negative feelings prevent you from doing your daily activities or interacting with family; cause major changes in your sleep, appetite or energy level; provoke excessive guilt or worry; or make you so distracted that you can’t concentrate or focus, you should consider seeking professional help. If you or someone you know has thoughts of suicide or becomes preoccupied with death, then an immediate response is required to help them regain control of their life.

In closing, it is very important for people affected by the economic downturn not to perceive their changed state of affairs as a personal failure. Rather, it must be accepted as an unfortunate consequence of turbulent times that are beyond any one person’s control. We must find ways to support one another as we adjust to changing circumstances in our lives. To move this agenda along, do something unexpectedly nice for someone today. If they seem to value what you’ve done, suggest that they pay it forward.

Stressed Out by the Economy? Reality Check/Coaching Sessions Offer Support

The economic downturn has affected nearly all of us in one way or another. Perhaps the hardest blow has been the unexpected severity of the impact on so many individuals who, despite doing all the right things, have lost jobs or suffered significant financial hardships. According to Ken Snow, MSW, ACSW, Vice President of Community Relations, "In recent months we have experienced a surge in requests for mental health care by individuals and families who have been impacted by these changes in the economy. Many have lost jobs, homes, savings and, unfortunately, health insurance. We are seeing people who are proud, bright, capable, successful people who were just completely unprepared and inexperienced in dealing with this level of financial distress and never imagined it could happen to them." "Our greatest concern is for individuals who are reluctant to seek the help they need because they have lost their health insurance and are concerned about creating another expense. We know that early intervention produces the best outcomes and can help prevent emotional distress from leading to more serious depression or psychological crises. As an agency, we are committed to respond to those people who, through no fault of their own, have been devastated and need to regain control of their lives," says Snow. That preventive support is now possible thanks to a $5,000 grant from TD Bank, through the TD Charitable Foundation. By partnering with TD Bank, The Center is now offering outreach to any resident of the region who has experienced a serious psychological/emotional response in the midst of the ongoing economic downturn by providing a free Reality Check/Coaching Session. This one-hour session with a licensed mental health practitioner at Bedford Counseling Associates will assess the nature and severity of the person's emotional state, his resiliency and suggestions for follow-up when indicated. The session will also provide coaching on stress management, creating emotional supports and strategic planning. Participants will receive a Pocket Guide for Managing Distress that includes helpful information on coping. The fact that the initial session is free eliminates the financial barriers to taking that first step in seeking support. "This gives us the opportunity to assess the person's emotional state and explore financial assistance options for appropriate follow-up care, when indicated," explains Snow.
